The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 16-19 and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kizuki '618.

Kizuki teaches a plurality of III-V layers grown with a surfactant. See column 4 lines 47-67 to column 5 lines 1-50. Claim 16 is anticipated. Claim 17 is rejected as antimony, bismuth, and particularly thallium are disclosed as being effective surfactants. Claim 18 is rejected as the process of producing the device does not distinguish the final product over the applied art. Patentability of a product by process claim is determined by the final product, regardless of how actually made, In re Hirao 190 USPQ 15 at 17 (footnote 3). See also In re Brown 173 USPQ 685; In re Luck 177 USPQ 523; In re Fessman 180 USPQ 324; In re Avery 186 USPQ 161; In re Wertheim 191 USPQ 90; and In re Morosi 218 USPQ 289, all of which make it clear that it is patentability of the final product per se which must be determined in a "product by process" claim, and not the patentability of the process, and that an old or obvious product produced by a new method is not patentable as a product, whether claimed in "product by process" claims or not. Note that applicant has the burden of proof in such cases, as the above caselaw makes clear.

Claim 19 is rejected as the fifth embodiment of '618 teaches AlGaAs material.

Claim 22 is rejected as '618 teaches various devices such as HEMTs, HBTs, etc.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 16-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Kizuki '618.

In regard to claims 20 and 21 note that Kizuki teaches antimony as a known surfactant. It would have been obvious to have practiced antimony surfactant for layer growth of smooth morphology in other III-V materials such as AlGaAs and GaInAs to form quantum well laser devices such as disclosed in column 1 lines 40-45.

Claims 16-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Yang et al 6/99.

Yang discloses a laser device produced with Sb surfactant. Note that Al and Ga material are present in certain layers. Applicant's claims are anticipated by Yang or at least obvious as the process of producing may not be exactly the same. The final product however appears to be anticipated. See the above recited caselaw.
